The Commons Sustain Gladstone on Debate.

THE CONFESSION OF MAXWELL.

Eight Men Shot in a Row—Lucky B's Luck—Western Union Mule-ed—Boycott Opposed.

[Special to the Herald by the Associated Press.]

LONDON, May 18.—Gladstone has moved that the House devote four nights out of every five to debate on the Home Rule bill. The Premier's proposal produced a sensation, as it had come to be generally believed that the government had about given up the hope of carrying their measure and would bring on a debate as early as possible. An excited discussion followed Gladstone's motion. During this both sides to the controversy revised their position. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Conservative, had said his party would pledge that the debate would be finished on Friday, June 1. To this Gladstone had replied that his reckoning extended the debate far beyond the date fixed by the opposition. After a long and warm discussion Gladstone's motion was carried.

ALL FROM NEW YORK.

LONDON, May 18.—The Irish National League has received from the Ninth New York Regiment and the Clan-na-Gael Society, of that city, offers to equip a corps of 1,000 men, who will be sent to support Home Rule in Ulster against any and all loyalist opposition.

MABELL'S CONFESSION.

She Admits Preller's Death, but Says it was by Accident.

ST. LOUIS, May 18.—The Post Dispatch prints a statement made by H. M. Bross, alias Maxwell, now on trial for the murder of C. Arthur Preller, which will constitute his only defense, and which will be urged by his attorney to killing Preller by accident, while acting as his physician, and that being frightened and excited, he concealed the facts of making known that he had done. He said he has always wanted to tell the facts, and only refrained by the advice of his attorneys. The following is Brocks' statement:

"Mr. Preller was suffering from pain disease for which I had previously prescribed, mixing the medicines myself from bottles in the medicine chest which I carried with me; but his ailment had reached a stage when he had to make certain investigations. I was obliged to use a catheter, and in using the catheter, when the parts were inserted, I had, I thought, a catheter inserted.

PREVIOUSLY APPLIED CHLOROFORM. In order to produce a condition of narcosis, I explained the process to Preller and told him what I should have to do. He was not only willing but was very anxious for me to treat him in this manner.

Brooks then tells of the purchase of chloroform, which was spilled in the sink of his laboratory, and what was done to the liquid to prepare it for his operations; of his going to Farnow's drug store and buying more; denying incidentally the statements that he there showed the drug to a friend and a maid, and confessing: "About 5 p. m. we began the operation. I adroitly slipped chloroform in the usual way, holding a saturated cloth to his nose. My partner, however, was not quite all right. It took several moments, I don't know exactly how long; then he entered the esthetic, when the parts were inserted, I had, I thought, a catheter inserted.

THE TERRIBLE RESCUE GAME.

I discovered this late, that he was dying. I imagined my error when this fact dawned upon me. I was with him with bright, but had presence of mind enough to cut his shirt and undershirt from his body, and get him into a shirt. I laid him around the neck and shoulders for half an hour or more. I did not give up until I was ready to drop from exhaustion, and my efforts were not until he had been dead some time. All the clothes he had at the time were his shirt and undershirt. He had stripped the operation. What could I do? I don't know what to do, except to drink; and I drank freely; I drank everything I could get, and I did not care what it was. What was my thoughts? I had not any. All I remember was that I drew on him a pair of drawers, the first that fell into my hands, and then a soap dish, and all right.

From which I had removed everything. What was done besides this I have no recollection. Liquor and consternation had possession of me, and I knew only that my feelings were those of the utmost despair, and I had in my mind that night, the same room in which remains were and it would be.

A LIFE FOR ME TO SAY.

I slept, for I did not, and I was glad when morning came. What I did not know, however, you know, for it all has been printed.

He says he supposed the post mortem when the body was found, and when the nature of the operation and cause of death. According to his own story, the cutting off of Preller's mustache, the inscription about "traitor" found in the trunk, and the signature of the man who was with him, are to be attributed to his use of liquor and fearlessness after the fatality.

VIRGINIA SHOOTING BEE. A Detonator Card Causes Eight Men to be Perfected.

NEW YORK, May 18.—The Herald says: "No greater tragedy has occurred in Virginia in a decade than that which fills this town with gloom and excitement. On Saturday night an anonymous circular was issued and posted all over town, that seriously reflected on W. K. Terry, a young business man, and his father, Lathron Terry, a prominent citizen. W. K. Terry telegraphed for his two brothers, living at Aiken Station, two hours away, and arrived, and after a brief conference with the printer and office and demanded the name of the author of the card. The printer told them he had to day to Henry Clews' office. Mr. Clews was made chairman, and after discussing the prospects of the road, was requested to appoint a committee to protect the interests of the stockholders. All the speeches of a confident and eloquent speaker, and to make good a contract which Goodsell had made with the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company, which the Western Union absorbed.

NEW STAMP SELLERS.

NEW YORK, May 18.—A special meeting of the Texas & Pacific stockholders was held to day at Henry Clews' office, and the president of the road, Mr. D. P. Spencer, a member of the Texas Board of Trade, and business man. The Terry brothers started in the direction of Spence's factory, and when half way out, were stopped by a number of persons who were all friends of W. K. Terry, a young business man, and his father, Lathron Terry, a prominent citizen. W. K. Terry addressed a few words to Spence, who told him not to shoot. Just then some one fired a pistol. The noise that follows beggars description. W. K. Terry was shot from the rear, the ball entering his spine, and lodging in a right bone. The bullet passed through the abdomen and fell dead. Ben Terry was shot through the neck and the body. Spence was shot in the hip, and his bullet passed through his heart. He received two balls in the groin and is thought to be fatally wounded. R. L. Jones, saloon keeper, E. L. Gregory, clerk at the Fair hotel, and a number of others present are all seriously hurt. The last two were hit by stray balls. The Terrys are well known members of an old family, and occupy a high social position.

After Cleveland Anarchists.

CLEVELAND, May 18.—For ten days past a group of German Anarchists have been holding meetings on the hills and calling on persons of their stripe to arm with guns and bombs. Today Mayor G. W. Gardner issued a proclamation forbidding such meetings.

WITTY MR. LABOUCHERE:

Makes Merry Remarks About Chamberlain's Cockaigne.

LONDON, May 18.—In the House of Commons, Mr. Labouchere said it was clear that the chief object of the opposition was to get rid of Mr. Gladstone.

The Liberals who were opposing the bill were simply asserting the power of the Tories to pursue a policy of coercion. Mr. Labouchere's speech was full of wit and conviviality, and the House, especially the references that he made to Mr. Chamberlain's "cockaigne," that gentleman, he said, reminded him of Moses on Mount Sinai. The member for Birmingham was as much as possible in the mood to do his best, and he was sure that the Liberals would have done an Israelite had proposed an amendment to the bill.

Mr. Labouchere suggested that the bill was to be a good measure, and that the government had about given up the hope of carrying their measure and would bring on a debate as early as possible. An excited discussion followed Gladstone's motion. During this both sides to the controversy revised their position. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Conservative, had said his party would pledge that the debate would be finished on Friday, June 1. To this Gladstone had replied that his reckoning extended the debate far beyond the date fixed by the opposition. After a long and warm discussion Gladstone's motion was carried.

Republicans Disfranchising the Soldiers.

It is well understood by all those who are not unduly liable to deception and whose prejudices do not entirely blind their reason, that the overweening love of the houses of the Republican party for the soldier is more pretense than reality; and that this pretense is only maintained by them, like the bloody shirt fetish, for the sole purpose of aiding them in obtaining the votes to induct themselves into the lucrative offices of the country, and to continue the gratification of their lust for power and place.

Nothing we could say could establish this proposition more fully than the following plain statement of facts, published in the Livingston Democrat, printed at Genesee, Livingston county, N. Y., May 3, 1886, which statement, made in the immediate vicinity where the facts occurred, is undoubtedly true in all particulars; and which we are constrained to give verbatim, as it so splendidly illustrates the general discrepancy between the prospect and practice of our Republican brethren in regard to the soldier, when in the exercise of the rights of an American citizen he chooses to vote the Democratic ticket:

"The Republicans love the soldiers, they do, provided they are Republican voters. The Soldiers' Home at Bath, in Steuben county, contains about 600 inmates, and there was never any question raised concerning the right of these veterans to the ballot, till it appeared that a majority of them preferred to vote the Democratic ticket. It is recorded that the Soldiers' Home gave a majority of twenty-five for Cleveland over Blaine, and a majority of fifty-eight for Hill over Davenport. Then the local Republicans arose in the ground that the Soldiers' Home is a sort of State Almshouse, and that its inmates, being paupers, are not entitled to vote. One of the soldiers brought suit against the election officers who refused to give his vote, laying his damages at $50. The sum is too small for the case to reach the Court of Appeals, and the probabilities are that if the matter remains as it is, it will not receive the consideration that it deserves. That there might be no injustice done in the matter, Mr. Wolf, the Democratic Representative of the district, introduced an Assembly bill making it lawful for the soldiers at the Home to vote. The Republicans refused, by a strict party vote to let this bill have its third reading. A similar bill introduced in the Senate by Murphy, was ordered by the Judiciary Committee, when the bill was introduced, to be referred to the Committee on the Rules, and the Union dissolved. Frederick Weingardt, one of the strikers, addressed Mr. D. C. Miller, president of the organization, late last night, and attempted to stab him. None of the soldiers returned to work.

Miss Folsom's Trouseau.
A FOAM IN EVERY SATIN TO CHARME THE PRESIDENT'S EYE.

NEW YORK, May 18.—A cable special from Paris says: "Miss Folsom's wedd'g trousseau, which will soon reach New York, has for days past been the talk of Paris. The wedding dress is a sateen in ivory tulle. The skirt and corset are simple, but their simplicity is relieved by a wealth of soft silk and Indian muslin, embroidered with orange blossoms, attached to the left side of the skirt and nearly meeting the train, which is over four yards in length. The train is tightly rounded and falls in two organ pleats. Two delicate satin sashes are draped over the muslin. The sleeves, which have the wrist, are almost to the elbow, have three bands of Indian muslin draped over them, forming a pelisse, while inside the arms, near the shoulder, are two small bunches of tiny sprigs of orange blossoms. The bridal veil is nearly seven yards long and is of plain white silk, with a lace border at the hem. The corsage and the corsage from left to right is a broad cintrine of satin, with a small bunch of orange blossoms. The waist is made of white silk, with a ruched sash. The white sash is a ruched sash. It is a tonic in the true sense, because it harmonizes and insures regularity of the operations of the heart, and it is a sure remedy for all diseases of the heart.

THE POPULATION OF LOS ANGELES.
THE population of Los Angeles was at least half as great with some affection of the heart and lungs. As those who are more numerous than others, we would advise not to neglect the advice of Kemp's physician, who is a man of great skill and knowledge. Kemp's physician, for the heart and lungs, will be sure to find out every little while, and the discovery advances it another stage toward ruin."

Beecher's Latest Utterance.

Beecher's utterances welcoming Anarchists, Communists, Socialists, Chinese and all other objectionable classes to the United States, are rather remarkable, so far as all but this eccentric man. It may be allowed a novelty for the highly-salaried preacher of a rich and fashionable church to hold forth in in-temperate language on the blessings to be derived from the presence of Communists, Anarchists and dynamiters in our midst, whose object is the destruction of society. It is understood that applause of the striking points in Beecher's sermons are a feature of Plymouth Church service, the demonstrations of approval sometimes reaching the uproarious character of a political meeting, but we are not informed that the sympathetic congregation applauded the above sentiment to any marked extent. It came upon them too suddenly for realization and appreciation.

But when Beecher delivered himself in regard to the Chinese, he uttered nothing new or striking so as Eastern sentiment is concerned. Notwithstanding his evident great strain to achieve a sensational climax, he gives nothing newer than the same old insatiable falsehood and driveling "converting the Chinese." In this he only parrot-like repeats the three-barreled refrain of all the mawkish Phrasers of New England for a decade. But when it comes to Beecher, personally, what does he know about converting anybody to anything, in a religious sense? The true inwardness of Beecher's own soul, is that he has always been perched on the "ragged edge" of
